JOCELYN BAIN HOGG

Bain Hogg's recent work focuses on unique stories from his native Britain.

Jocelyn Bain Hogg began his career as a unit photographer on movie sets after studying Documentary Photography at Newport Art College. He shot publicity for the BBC, photographed fashion and now works on documentary projects and commercial and editorial assignments. His editorial work features in Vanity Fair, The Sunday Times, The New Yorker, The Observer, Vogue, Elle, Harpers Bazaar, Marie Claire, Stern, GQ, Esquire, Max, Le Monde, Cahiers du Cinema, L'Espresso and La Repubblica.

Jocelyn is the author of five photographic books. His first, The Firm, presented an astonishingly intimate view of London's organized crime world and won international acclaim, garnering the prestigious Lead Award for portraiture (2003, Germany). His book The Family, a ten-year-on update from The Firm, looks again at Britain's organized crime world in a new decade and premiered as an exhibition at the Visa Pour L'Image festival in Perpignan, France in 2011. Most recently, Jocelyn's book A British Entertainment looks at the British class system at both public and private events was released in May 2012.

In 2008 Jocelyn was commissioned by Sky News to document the issues surrounding British youth for an extensive essay for Sky News Online and an exhibition at City Hall in London. He is presently continuing this work for Sea Change, a major project started in 2012 documenting youth across Europe for which he is also photo-director.

Jocelyn has recently finished working on an innovative book project about the city of his birth: London. Tired of London, Tired of Life is a collaboration between three artists of different creative disciplines: his photographs collude with artist Paul Davis' drawings, and designer Henrietta Molinaro's vision. The project is due for publication by Emphasis in Spring 2013.
